MEENA SESHAMANI is director of the Office of Health Reform at the Department of Health and Human Services, where she helps to strategically manage the implementation of the Affordable Care Act and delivery system reform. Recently she practiced as a head and neck surgeon at Kaiser Permanente in San Francisco. From February 2009 to November 2010, she served in the Office of Health Reform, first as director of policy analysis and then as deputy director. She received her B.A. with honors, magna cum laude, in business economics from Brown University, her M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, her DPhil (PhD) in health economics from the University of Oxford, and her residency training in otolaryngology-head and neck surgery at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

DANIEL DURHAM is executive vice president for policy and regulatory affairs for America's Health Insurance Plans, where he leads health care reform implementation efforts and policy activities. He has over 25 years of leadership experience with major policy and regulatory issues, primarily in the health care field. Previously, he served as a vice president for policy at the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, where he played a leadership role during health care reform and implementation of the Medicare prescription drug program. He also served in high-level policy positions in the federal government at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the Social Security Administration, and the Office of Management and Budget. Mr. Durham also held key policy positions at AARP and the California Legislative Analyst's Office. He received his undergraduate degree in government and philosophy from the University of Notre Dame and a master's degree in public policy from Duke University.

TIMOTHY JOST holds the Robert L. Willett Family Professorship of Law at the Washington and Lee University School of Law. He is a coauthor of a casebook, Health Law, used widely throughout the United States in teaching health law. He is also the author of Health Care at Risk, A Critique of the Consumer-Driven Movement, Health Care Coverage Determinations: An International Comparative Study, Readings in Comparative Health Law and Bioethics, and many articles and book chapters on health care regulation and comparative health law and policy. He has written numerous monographs and articles on health reform and blogs regularly for Health Affairs, where he is a contributing editor, on Affordable Care Act implementation issues. He is a consumer representative to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and a member of the Institute of Medicine.
