

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHIES

Is the Mind Part of the Body? –

The Challenge of Integrating Behavioral Health and Primary Care in a Reform Era

May 2, 2014

BERNARD ENGELBERG is the senior medical director for Cenpatico, Centene's managed behavioral health organization. He has been in active practice for over 20 years in both inpatient and outpatient psychiatry. Before joining Cenpatico in 2008, Dr. Engelberg was senior medical director at MVP Health Care in Schenectady, New York. Among other senior clinical positions held, Dr. Engelberg has been chief of psychiatry for the Northeast Permanente Medical Group of Kaiser Permanente and chief of psychiatry for CHP in Latham, New York. He has also been involved in teaching as an assistant director of residency training at the Albany Medical College and in research projects on immunoglobulins in Germany and on social anxiety disorder for the Center of Stress and Anxiety in Albany. He is board certified by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology in both general psychiatry as well as geriatric psychiatry. He has a bachelor's degree in behavioral sciences from Drew University, and he graduated with his medical degree from Goettingen University in Germany. He completed his residency in psychiatry as well as a fellowship in partial hospitalization services at Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn, New York.

LONNIE FULLER is a physician at Baltimore Medical System (BMS), which is the largest Federally Qualified Health Center (FQHC) system in Maryland. He joined BMS in 2011 and currently practices internal medicine at the Highlandtown office. Previously, Dr. Fuller worked at McKesson for four years as the medical director for the Pennsylvania Medicaid ACCESS Plus PCCM-DM program. During this time, he provided clinical leadership to the primary care case management and disease management program. While in this position, he also implemented a diabetes mini-learning collaborative and visited numerous physician offices, identifying early adopters of clinical process improvement, and facilitating the sharing of best practices among geographically separate clinical leaders. From October 2002 through November 2006, Dr. Fuller worked as the medical director of Hamilton Health Center, an FQHC serving the uninsured and underserved of Central Pennsylvania. One of his primary roles was to broaden a collaborative sense of ownership among staff to facilitate the improvement in the lives of those less fortunate. Dr. Fuller has also served in senior clinical roles at other integrated health and consulting enterprises. Dr. Fuller has a bachelor's degree in physics from Franklin & Marshall College and an M.D. from the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston. He completed his internship and residency in internal medicine at the Medical College of Pennsylvania. He is a member of both the American College of Physicians and the American College of Physician Executives.

MICHAEL HOGAN served as New York State Commissioner of Mental Health from 2007 to 2012, and now operates a consulting practice in health and behavioral health care. The NYS Office of Mental Health manages New York's $5 billion public mental health system serving 650,000 individuals annually. Previously, Dr. Hogan served as director of the Ohio Department of Mental Health (1991 to 2007) and commissioner of the Connecticut Department of Mental Health from 1987 to 1991. He chaired the President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health from 2002 to 2003. He was appointed as the first behavioral health representative on the board of The Joint Commission in 2007, and as a member of the National Action Alliance for Suicide Prevention in 2010. He served (1994 to 1998) on the National Institute of Mental Health's National Advisory Mental Health Council, as president of the National Association of State Mental Health Program Directors (NASMHPD) (2003 to 2005) and as board president of NASMHPD's Research Institute (1989 to 2000). His awards for national leadership include recognition by the National Governors Association, the National Alliance on Mental Illness, the Campaign for Mental Health Reform, the American College of Mental Health Administration and the American Psychiatric Association. He is a graduate of Cornell University, earned a M.S. degree from the State University College in Brockport, New York, and a Ph.D. from Syracuse University.

(over)

NICK MACCHIONE has been the director of the Health and Human Services Agency for the County of San Diego in California since 2008. As one of the nation's largest local integrated delivery systems for health and human services, the agency integrates primary care and behavioral health services, cross-sector integration using collective impact, and cultural transformation of its client centric services. Prior to becoming agency director, Mr. Macchione served as the agency's deputy director for ten years where he earned numerous national and local awards for service delivery innovation and organizational leadership. Since 2007, he has also served as the John Hanlon Executive Scholar of health management and policy at the Graduate School of Public Health, San Diego State University. Before joining the agency in 1997, he was executive director of the Newark Eligible Metropolitan Area Health Services Planning Council. Mr. Macchione serves in several leadership roles in regional, state and national policy committees addressing health and social services, including Milbank Memorial Fund's Reforming States Group and the National Association of Counties. He is board certified in healthcare management and holds fellow status with the American College of Healthcare Executives. In addition, he holds two national fellowships with the American Hospital Association as a Creating Healthier Communities fellow and the Public Health Leadership Institute and Centers for Disease Control & Prevention as a public health scholar. In addition, Mr. Macchione completed professional certifications for senior healthcare executive leadership at Harvard University and managerial epidemiology at Johns Hopkins University. Mr. Macchione has master's degrees in health services management from New York University and health policy from Columbia University.

LAUREL M. NEWMAN has been the lead quality implementation manager of the Primary Care Clinical Program at Intermountain Healthcare (IH) in Salt Lake City, Utah since November 2011. Prior to this position, she worked for 13 years as a nurse manager, clinic manager, and nurse consultant operationalizing mental health integration (MHI) efforts at Intermountain Medical Group. Her expertise in ambulatory care has been in leading MHI frontline teams in quality improvement, implementation of evidence-base care process models and outcome measurement. At IH, her contributions to the MHI program have helped it to spread rapidly in over 90 IH medical group clinics, including uninsured, rural specialty care clinics and 45 non-IH community clinics throughout the United States. Ms. Newman received her B.S. in nursing from the University of Utah.