Health Insurance Exchanges: Can States and the Federal Government Meet the Deadline?

July 27, 2012

SARA R. COLLINS, PH.D., is vice president for Affordable Health Insurance at the Commonwealth Fund. An economist, Dr. Collins joined the Fund in 2002 and has led the Fund's national program on health insurance since 2005. Since joining the Fund, she has led several national surveys on health insurance and has written numerous reports, issue briefs and journal articles on health insurance coverage and policy. She has provided invited testimony before several congressional committees and subcommittees. Prior to joining the Fund, Dr. Collins was associate director/senior research associate at the New York Academy of Medicine's Division of Health and Science Policy. Earlier in her career, she was an associate editor at U.S. News & World Report, a senior economist at Health Economics Research, and a senior health policy analyst in the New York City Office of the Public Advocate. She holds an A.B. in economics from Washington University and a Ph.D. in economics from George Washington University.

KRISTA DROBAC is director of the Health Division at the National Governors Association (NGA) Center for Best Practices, where she leads state technical assistance, research, policy analysis and project development for health issues. The division works with states to share and implement best and promising practices on health care issues facing states, including health care exchanges and reform, Medicaid, health IT, delivery system reform and public health programs. Prior to joining NGA, Ms. Drobac served as a senior advisor in both the Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight and the Center for Medicaid and CHIP Services within the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. Previously, she was the deputy director of the Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services, where she: developed a strategy to advance the electronic exchange of health information; proposed and began implementing a program to change Medicaid payment to deter hospital infections; worked with a team to develop and implement pay-for-performance program for primary care physicians in Medicaid; and devised a pilot program to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the treatment of chronic disease. She also served as a health advisor to two U.S. senators, handling all legislative issues related to Medicare, Medicaid, health insurance, medical liability insurance, Social Security, FDA, prescription drugs, medical professions, patient safety and dietary supplements. Ms. Drobac received her M.P.P. from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, and her B.A. in political science from the University of Michigan.

MICHAEL HASH is the acting director of the Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight and the director of the Office of Health Reform at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. In this capacity, Mr. Hash is helping to coordinate the department's work on implementation of health reform and provides outreach to Congress and stakeholder groups with interests in health reform. From April 2009 until January 2011, he served as the deputy director of the White House Office of Health Reform, helping to coordinate the administration's legislative and implementation efforts related to the Affordable Care Act. Prior to his federal appointment, he was a principal at Health Policy Alternatives, Inc., a Washington-based health consulting firm specializing in health policy and financing issues for a wide array of provider, consumer, foundation, and corporate clients. Mr. Hash served as the deputy administrator and acting administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration (now the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services) from March 1998 through December 2000. Earlier, he served as the senior staff associate of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment of the House Energy and Commerce Committee with responsibilities for Medicare legislation and health care reform proposals. He is a graduate of Washington and Lee University, with post-graduate studies in political science at Vanderbilt University. He has held teaching positions at the Johns Hopkins University and Georgetown University, and was chair of the board at Providence Hospital in Washington, D.C.

TIMOTHY STOLTZFUS JOST holds the Robert L. Willett Family Professorship of Law at the Washington and Lee University. He is a coauthor of a casebook, Health Law, used throughout the United States in teaching health law. He is also the author of Health Care at Risk, A Critique of the Consumer-Driven Movement and numerous articles and book chapters on health care regulation and comparative health law. Mr. Jost blogs regularly for Health Affairs on regulatory issues. He is a consumer representative to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and a member of the Institute of Medicine. He received his J.D. from the University of Chicago.

BRIAN WEBB is the manager of health policy and legislation for the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC). The NAIC represents the insurance regulators in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories. Before joining NAIC, Mr. Webb worked on Medicare and Medicaid policy for the BlueCross BlueShield Association and, prior to that, was the assistant vice president for legislation for the then-Federation of American Health Systems. He began working in Washington, D.C. on health care policy in 1988 as a legislative aide for Congressman Bill Thomas. After six years with Congressman Thomas, Mr. Webb worked five years in California Governor Pete Wilson's Washington, D.C. office as health and welfare aide and deputy director. He has a master's degree in public administration from the George Washington University and a bachelor's degree from BIOLA University in California.
