Health Reform for Non-Health Reform Reporters

July 2, 2009

ED HOWARD, J.D., (edhoward@allhealth.org) has headed up the Alliance for Health Reform as executive vice president since its formation in 1991. Prior to the Alliance's founding, Mr. Howard served as the general counsel for the U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care, the "Pepper Commission," which reported to Congress on ways to assure access to health care and long-term care for all Americans. Before that, he worked on issues affecting low-income older people at the Villers Foundation and was general counsel for the House Select Committee on Aging under the chairmanship of the late Representative Claude Pepper, where he played a key role in passing legislation to protect older workers beyond age 65. He has written and lectured across the country, and testified before Congress, on a range of topics related to aging and health, including long-term care, the uninsured, Social Security, Medicaid, Medicare, age discrimination in the workplace and services for the elderly. Mr. Howard holds a juris doctor degree from Harvard University.

DEAN ROSEN, (dean@mvc-dc.com) a partner at the public affairs firm Mehlman Vogel Castagnetti, Inc. and head of the firm's health practice. He provides policy counsel and strategic advice to policy makers, business leaders, trade association executives and not-for-profit organizations on a broad range of health issues. Prior to joining Mehlman Vogel Castagnetti, Mr. Rosen held a series of high-level positions in both government and the private sector. He was the chief health care advisor to former Senate Majority Leader William H. Frist, M.D (R-TN), after serving as staff director for the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Public Health. Previously, he was senior vice president of policy and general counsel for the Health Insurance Association of America (HIAA). Mr. Rosen came to HIAA from the House Ways and Means Health Subcommittee where, as majority counsel, he played a significant role in developing the Medicare provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. He also served as health policy coordinator and majority counsel to the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources. There, he had principal responsibility for advising the committee chair on a wide range of health care and employee benefit issues. Before entering the public sector, Mr. Rosen practiced law at Dow, Lohnes and Albertson
