What's a strength you bring to health policy?

My public health education and perspective have been an indispensable strength, helping me successfully break through silos to explore actionable solutions to improve health outcomes.

What does leadership look like to you at this stage in your career?

Leadership requires a willingness to learn from past policy successes and failures and a commitment to building the coalitions to successfully implement policies. It looks like a lot of listening and stepping out of your comfort zone to find the partners that will help turn ideas into action.

What's a health policy issue that personally motivates you?

A passion for eliminating health disparities and making affordable, quality health care available to all regardless of circumstances is what brought me to the field of health policy. After seeing the impact of disparities firsthand, I am motivated daily to continue the work to overcome them.
