What's a health policy issue that personally motivates you?

Growing up in a rural state like New Mexico, I am motivated to help craft innovative solutions improving patients access to high quality, accessible, and affordable health care services. While telehealth has helped, many rural communities still lack basic infrastructure to provide these services.

What does leadership look like to you at this stage in your career?

To me, leadership means being open and willing to learn from everyone around you. Leaders are able to take and give constructive criticism that furthers personal growth and development in themselves and their team.

What are you proudest of in your health policy work so far?

My proudest moment in my health policy work is when family members sent me clips of my boss speaking in a Finance hearing, congratulating him for a job well done. It is rewarding to see him succeed after our team worked so hard in preparation.
